Egypt Won't Let Ship Leave Port

The Egyptian government issued a statement "condemning the developments" and voicing its "utmost regret" and surprise over the American operation.

The four Palestinians held more

CAIRO - "We were in the dining room ready for our dessert, when suddenly we heard gunshots and someone yelled, 'Get down on the floor," said Viola Meskin, oneof 12 Americans who were taken hostage in a two-day ordeal on the cruise ship Achille Lauro.

What followed was a violent odyssey that cost the life of a 69-year-old American invalid and often eemed to be leading nowhere.

The American action brought a climax to a drama that started Monday when four Palestinian gunmen commandeered the Achille Lauro, a 23,629-ton liner carrying more than 500 persons, off the Egyptian coast, and held it for two days. Americans Are Jubilant Over Hijackers' Capture

NEW YORK - Many Americans, frustrated by a series of hijacks and hostage-takings that have gone unpunished, reacted with ju-bilation Friday after learning that the hijackers of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro had been captured in a U.S. military operation.

Newspaper headlines, comments by politicians and random interviews indicated that many people felt it was about time the United States went after terrorists.

"We Bag the Burns," read the banner headline of the New York Daily News. In Los Angeles, the Herald Examiner headline said, This Time We Got 'Em." Reflecting the mood of many congressmen, Representative Daniel A. Mica, Democrat of Florida, called the capture "fantastic." Referring to the reported killing by the hijackers of Leon Klingh-

A precedent exists for the U.S. action: France captured Ben Bella in 1956.

For many Americans, the capture marked a turnaround from a series of frustrating hostage episodes, such as the ones in which Iranian students held Americans at the embassy in Tehran from November 1979 to January 1981 and the hijacking last summer of a TWA jetliner to Beirut. The abductors usually have escaped.

Jimmy Carter, the president whose last year in office was consumed with the Iranian hostage crisis, said in New York, "I think we've done a fine iob. The capture of the hijackers of the Achille Lauro struck a responsive chord among people interviewed Friday in New York City.

"I think it's great," said Anne Anderson, a secretary at a magazine office. "They are muggers and murderers and they are museing and murdering us. We were getting pushed around too much."

WASHINGTON - Heart attack victims and certain others who suffer heart pains could reduce the likelihood of dying from further heart attacks by taking an aspirin a day, cording to federal health officials.

They suggested Thursday that, in the United States, such aspirin treatments might save 30,000 to 50,000 lives a year. The health officials also said that a newly approved device that can be surgically implanted in patients to counteract severe irregularities in heartbeat might save 10,000 to 20,000 additional lives a year.

Margaret M. Heckler, secretary of health and human services, said that the two new developments constituted "dramatic new progress against death from heart attacks." She cautioned that studies reviewed by the government did not show whether aspirin would be effective in preventing heart attacks in healthy people. Dr. Frank E. Young, the commissioner of food and drugs, ed by diplomats, who consider miladvised heart patients to consult their physicians before

She said the studies, some of which lasted up to four years, were not consistent in every respect. But overall results indicated that an aspirin a day taken by patients who had had previous heart attacks reduced the chance of another heart attack or of dying during the study period by about

> Aspirin had an even greater effect in patients suffering from "unstable angina," or chest pains that had worsened within the past month, according to a three-month study conducted by the Veterans Administration, the health officials said. In these cases, it halved the risk of progressing to a heart attack, or of dving from a heart attack, from a 12percent chance without aspirin to a 6-percent chance with > Federal officials said the seven studies were not "equally convincing" but, taken together, provided evidence of a "modest but worthwhile" effect in heart attack victims and a "more striking effect" in patients with unstable angina.

The device whose approval was announced Thursday is an "implantable cardiac defibrillator," about the size of a deck of cards, and weighing 1.5 pounds (680 grams). It costs $15,000 and is meant to be implanted in patients with severe irregularities in heartbeat, abnormally rapid heart rate, or uncoordinated heart muscle contractions.

The device senses when the heart loses its normal rhythm Whereas 12 to 22 percent of the heart patients not taking and generates an electrical pulse to restore the normal pace.

Handgun Suppliers Liable for Damages

Small, cheap handguns, pop-ularly known as "Saturday Night Specials," are notorious for shoddy materials and workmanship, as well as "inaccuracy and unreliability," the Mary-land Court of Appeals says. Therefore such weapons are "virtually useless for the legitimate purposes of law enforcement, sport and protection" and are of little use to anybody but criminals, the state's highesttribunal finds. Animal welfare authorities in Birmingham, Alabama, checked out the Aqua Mules at the state fair and found that it does the animals no discernible harm to dive off a 30-foot (9meter) platform into a six-footdeep tank of water. The mules' owner, Tim Rivers of McIntosh, Florida, said he has been through such investigations before. He said he starts mules swimming when they are very young, then teaches them how to dive, beginning at two feet, and rewards them with carrots. The authorities said they found the mules to be "butterball fat and well taken care of."

Appropriate Words For All Occasions

"These days," observes John F. Berry in the Los Angeles Times, "almost everything that happens seems to fall into one of two categories: appropriate or mappropriate." Mr. Berry writes that appro-

People these days are more comfortable judging things as appropriate or inappropriate instead of "right or wrong, moral or immoral." WASHINGTON — Four U.S. Navy F-14 fighter planes, assisted by two surveillance aircraft and two tankers, carried out Friday's interception of the Egyptian Boeing 737 carrying the hijackers of the Achille Lauro, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger has disclosed.

Mr. Weinberger, briefing reporters on the operation, refused to say whether the four F-14s from the aircraft carrier Saratoga had been prepared to use force if necessary to divert the Egyptian aircraft.

In an apparent reference to U.S. military special operations units reportedly deployed to the region. Panel Urges Changes in Pentagon

By Bill Keller New York Times Service WASHINGTON --- A presidential commission has concluded that fundamental changes should be made in the organization of the Pentagon to correct weapon problems involving poor quality, high prices and long delays in purchasing, the panel's chairman said.

In his first extensive public comments since he was named to head the commission in June, David R. Packard said that management reforms and new codes of conduct would not be enough to repair a system he described as "worse than it was 15 years ago."

"Some structural changes are necessary," Mr. Packard said.

- He said that while the Reagan administration's military buildup had improved the strength and morale of the U.S. military, "I think the general conclusion is we should have gotten more for our money."
The commission is to send detailed recommendations to President Ronald Reagan early next year.

Mr. Packard, a former deputy secretary of defense, is the latest in a series of public figures with mili-tary credentials who have said that problems of waste and poor combat performance can be traced to institutional defects in the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense Department and Congress.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Barry Goldwater, Republican of Arizona, and the committee's senior Demotrat, Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia, said last week that such defects had produced waste and underned the military's readiness to

As the ship floated off the Syrian coast Tuesday afternoon, the hijackers tried through radio contacts to negotiate the release of 50 Palestinian prisoners from Israel. The pirates had hoped that the U.S. and Italian ambassadors in Damascus would act as intermediaries, but became impatient because of the slowness of the response.

Mrs. Hodes said the hostages had been ordered to the upper deck so that British and U.S. officials could see them. One American, however, had been left behind.

Achille Lauro. They have to be brought to trial, and the United States, Italy and Egypt were bound in law and decency to see to that.

When the Egyptians appeared reluctant, it was entirely appropriate for the United States to remind them of the consequences of disdain for the lives of innocent tourists — the inevitable consequence, for example, for Egypt's profitable tourist business.

For a time the cowardice of the Palestinian gunmen seemed to be rivaled by that of President Mubarak of Egypt when he claimed not to know what happened to them. He may not have known of the murder when he promised them safe passage out of Egypt, but he knew soon enough to detain them. And he knows now, despite his indecent remark that "there is no body and no proof," that Leon Klinghoffer and his wheelchair were thrown overboard.

Not everything is known about how the hijackers left Egypt and how the United States caught up with them. If Egypt was finally persuaded to help point the way, it will at least have atoned for some of the early fumbling.

Italy's original deal with the PLO to have Egypt release the hijackers in return for release of the ship and hostages was bad enough. No one was bound to honor an agreement extracted under such duress, particularly when there were suspicions that the PLO was itself in- condemn their backers. All who obstruct that volved in guiding the hijackers. Be that as it may, all deals were off when Italy's main

The murder of an ailing American passenger condition — that no one had been harmed — nullified any deal to free the hijackers of the turned out to be a lie, uttered by the ship's captain with a gun to his head.

Fast crumbling also is Yasser Arafat's pro-testation that the PLO had no part in the affair. As The New York Times's Thomas Friedman reports, the gunmen appear to be Mr. Arafat's allies and were probably planning a guerrilla raid in Israel when the ship reached Ashdod. Discovery of their weapons seems to have changed their plan and emboldened Mr. Arafat to paint himself as the outraged savior of innocent passengers and crew.

But, genuine or not, the statements of Egypt, Italy and the PLO all pointed to the same just conclusion of this episode. Egypt and the PLO said they favored punishment of the murderers. Italy, from the moment it learned of the killing, asked for extradition so the gunmen could be charged and tried. Since Egypt was made the foil of the affair, it was honor bound to detain the hijackers.

The world's interest in justice in this case should have been self-evident throughout. As nations try to deny hijackers safe haven and landing rights, terrorists have taken to murder to force their way into airports and harbors. The citizens of every country are at risk, whatever their governments' Middle East policies. For once, the world has a chance to avenge these outrages, punish the perpetrators and chance fail their duty to mankind.

Dumb Dinosaurs of Old

No point tiptoeing around the subject any longer: Evidence is mounting that the dinosaurs had the bomb. Surely everyone has by now at least considered the obvious possibility, as each new scientific finding is piled on the last. Last week we are informed, apropos of the dinosaurs' rather sudden and endlessly puzzling extinction some 65,000,000 years ago, that there seems to have been a worldwide firestorm at the time. There was also, we are told, a huge amount of soot everywhere seeming to come from a very dense cloud. The effect of the cloud and the subsequent darkening of the sky brought on a devastating global "winter." We had already long since heard the theories that the impact of some extraterrestrial object hitting Earth had caused this darkening. Does it all begin to hang together?

Well, ask yourself, "The worst hit region," said a report about the recent scientific article, "was between the Ural Mountains of central Eurasia (SS-18s, we surmise) and the Rocky Mountains (the Malmstrom missile base in Montana, surely) of North America, where 69 percent of known fossil species died out."

Whether a prior argument had raged among defense-intellectual dinosaurs concerning the wisdom and/or morality of taking measures to protect some fraction of the population before became fossils, we don't know. Our encyclopedia does remind us that the dinosaur race was pretty much divided into two distinct camps: the saurischians ("lizardhipped") and the ornithischians ("birdhipped"). Which ones were first to MIRV, the encyclopedia does not say. That information, possibly classified, has yet to emerge. However, it becomes increasingly clear to us that it is only a matter of time until we know.

Our encyclopedia makes the well-known point that the dinosaurs' "intelligence, judged by the size of their brain cavities, was uniformlow." Holdouts against our hypothesis, and other spoilsports, will undoubtedly argue from this that the saurischians and the ornithischians were too dumb to have invented the bomb. But whatever intelligence it may have taken to invent the bomb, surely stupidity of a much greater order of magnitude was required to use it to obliterate the whole race.

We have an open scientific mind. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

United Now Against Terror?

At the end of a long day's journey toward justice, there was a good omen. The American F-14s that interrupted the Egyptian transport with four terrorists aboard took off from the carrier Saratoga, named after the battle that proved the turning point of the American Revolution. Let this be the turning point of a united West's war against terror.

- The Pine Bluff (Arkansas) Commercial.

After years of seeing Uncle Sam the hapless victim of a host of international terrorists. Americans across the nation have to be walking a little taller today. Obviously the capture of the hijackers is not going to end terrorism in the Mideast or elsewhere. But action taken by this country may send a message to those who would engage in terrorism that their activities carry some measure of risk. Perhaps it will make them just a bit more terrorized at the possible consequences of their actions the next time they terrorize others.

There Vietnam Goes Again

One is tempted to tell Vietnam, "There you go again." There is a certain monotony to the attempt made by Vietnam every year at the United Nations General Assembly to pretend that "things are moving in the right direction."

We would like very much to be able to say in good faith, yes, peace in Kampuchea is at hand and an honorable and just political solution finally appears possible. We would love to see an end to the suffering of everybody - the Kampucheans of course, but also the Thai border villagers and the young soldiers of Vietnam. But, contrary to what Vo Dong delegation of his country to the United Nations, claimed during his address to the world assembly, hardly anything has happened to give credibility to his proclamation of progress. Hanoi has shown little interest in the idea of proximity talks, and still acts very much as if the situation is "irreversible."

- The Bangkok Post.

A Monetary Balancing Act

What America needs is a lower deficit, not a balanced budget which would entail still fewer resources to tackle Third World growth and capital expansion in the United States. It is all a delicate balancing act. The deficit and interest rates need to come down to give the dollar a "soft landing," but the prospect of a balanced budget could push the dollar back up. After all, if the United States is such a strong magnet for world savings with a gargantuan deficit, it is not obvious that it will be any less so with a balanced budget in prospect which can only increase the "safe haven" argument for leaving investment in the United States.

This underlines the crucial importance of [U.S. Treasury Secretary James] Baker's first initiative, whereby the top five nations should intervene in the foreign exchange markets to prevent so-called market forces from blowing currencies off course. It is reassuring that President François Mitterrand's hitherto lone call for a monetary conference to develop this initiative into a new world regime along the lines of Bretton Woods is at last gathering support, particularly in Congress. It would be ironic if France, having lost the battle (when it was forced to abort its solo dash for growth), should win the war.

What another Roosevelt Administration would mean in the way of extravagance, usurpation, lawlessness and panic may easily be imagined. All these evils would appear in due course, but they would be incidental. His main object or passion, as recent speeches show, is personal absolutism. Although outwardly an exponent of "complete, immediate and absolute independence," Mr. Quezon never wanted independence either immediately or completely. Instead, he wanted full autonomy for the Philippines under American protection. For the next ten years, the Philippines will be free internally, but protected by American troops. Needed: A New Art Of Summit-Scoring a U.S.-Soviet summit conference has certain striking parallels with preparing for a State of the Union address. And one of the special tricks of writing a State of the Union is worth bearing in mind as November's Geneva meeting be-tween President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev approaches. Like a summit, a State of the Union combines high drama with high expectations and commands an enormous andience. Both are policy-forcing exercises. Presidents and their staffs work overtime hammering out positions and reaching decisions so that policies get made that might otherwise be postponed. Both exercises are subjected to intense media evaluation, as correspondents trot out their scorecards and declare success or failure. It is this — the scoring — that gives rise to the special trick of writing a State of the Union address.

By Raymond Price

When a president delivers a State of the Union, the members of the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate, the cabinet, the Supreme Court and the diplomatic corps assembled before him are a star-studded supporting cast in a drama played for the 70 or 80 million people watching on their television sets. Politically, it is vital to a president that the address be judged a success. Practically, the judgment with the most impact will be delivered immediately afterward by a handful of network commentators and influential newspaper writers. A president knows from experience that the form of this judgment is likely to be either "He was interrupted 27 times by applause; he had Congress in the palm of his hand" or "He was only applauded five times, so the speech was a dud." So what do you do? As I learned while working on four of them, you

WASHINGTON — Preparing write in applause lines. This is simple enough. It takes only half the audience, or even less, to "inter-rupt." Hit one side or the other of an emotional issue in a ringing way. and one side or the other of the chamber will burst into applause. The issue can be abortion or taxes or defense or peace or whatever. The line can simply reiterate known presidential views. It serves its purpose if it raises the correspondents' count of interruptions. The result is to heighten the drama while lowering the quality of State of the Union addresses.

A similar pattern is developing as the summit nears. Commentators are busily anticipating "success" or "failure," and the terms in which they are doing this are quantitative rather than qualitative. How big a pile of papers can be pointed to as agreements"? And will it include the big one — arms control? It is taking on a frantic, does-heor-doesn't-he, will-she-or-won't-she kind of air - with most commentators suggesting that if only President Reagan would yield on nuclear defenses, the summit would "succeed." Lost in the media melee is serious consideration of the kind of agreement, or of how well it serves the American interest.

What makes a good State of the Union address is not the quantity of applause, and what makes a successful summit is not the quantity —or even necessarily the subject —of agreements. What matters is the nature of agreements and their relationship to the process itself. There are three key elements to weigh in evaluating a summit: The quality of agreements, no matter how many or few. It is far better to have no agreement than a bad one. An arms control pact that left the United States less secure would make peace more fragile.

'Moscow has stolen our most potent technology!'

 The assessment that each leader makes of the other's skill and determination. Peace will be stronger if the Soviets leave Geneva convinced that Ronald Reagan is a leader not to be trifled with, and that in future crises it would be dangerous to put his will to the ultimate test. The Soviets do not have to be convinced that the United States wants peace. They know from breaking the peace. • The degree to which it advances the continuing summit process. The relationship between the United States and the U.S.S.R. is unique, and uniquely vital to the world. Summit meetings between the two countries' leaders should be a regular, annual part of that relationship, routinely prepared for and routinely conducted. To the extent that frenzied instant evaluations of success or failure can be reduced, the process will have better longterm prospects of success.

Putting summits on a regular bathat. They do have to be convinced sis can lower the level of frenzy and constantly that they cannot profit raise the chances of accomplishments. If next month's meeting leads to an agreement to make such summits an annual event, that in itself would be a significant success.

Reagan and Gorbachev Aren't Condemned to Fail

WASHINGTON — Most speculation about next month's U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in Geneva has been negative if not downright pessimistic, and it is easy to understand why. But an argument can be made for a little patience.

Public diplomacy — a contradiction in terms -clearly fascinates Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev, taking their minds off immediate problems at home. But the pre-summit propaganda and the endless analyses of personalities cannot reliably predict the summit's outcome.

Geneva is not merely a meeting of two men with different personalities, philosophies and political techniques, but of two states at the summit of world power. They may disagree about how to deal with each other on Earth or in the stars, but have a common interest in avoiding cla of nuclear power and trade power, and in not unleashing terror and chaos in the world.

The present gloom may be justified, but this is probably a time to wait and see, and particularly to get the secretaries of state and defense, and Robert McFarlane of the National Security Council, off the weekend television shows for a while and down to a settled nuclear policy. So far this has not been done. The president's running to hundreds of pages, which he will probably never read — "fine-tuning" him, as they say, as if he were a machine or a fiddle. This is probably a burn idea. No doubt Mr. Reagan needs technical and political help on all these mysteries, but he is no negotiator, and with all his divided "advisers" at his side in Geneva aides are giving him dozens of "position papers,

By James Reston

tugging him this way and that, it might not be a bad idea to leave him to his hopeful generalities. The question for President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev is not whether they will come to some dramatic agreement about Soviet offensive missiles or "star wars" defenses sometime in the future. It is merely whether they can knock off the propaganda for awhile and, after Geneva, get some sensible officials together to consider the facts and begin serious negotiations. Summit meetings are not the place to negotiate the intricate and mystifying tangles of nuclear weapons. There will be too little time in a day or two at Geneva, too much hoopla; too many interminable translations, too many state dinners, press interviews and phony courtesies and too little time for the definition of policies that Washington and Moscow could depend upon for the rest of the century. Yet summit meetings have their uses. When Mr. Gorbachev went to Paris, he had to listen to the objections of President François Mitterrand and submit himself to the questions of the French press about the threat of Soviet missiles targeted on Paris and the violence of the Soviet state against its citizens who dissent and are jailed for it. That is not much, but it is something. In Washington, as usual, there is honest confu-sion about what Mr. Gorbachev's smiling new approach means and how Mr. Reagan should approach him at the summit. Some of the president's aides regard the whole Gorbachev exercise as a cunning propaganda trick. Others agree that it may be so, but prefer to wait and see.

Mr. Reagan is rather good at dreaming and switching. He does not follow Mr. Gorbachev's statements or even his own very carefully, which is not necessarily a bad thing.

President Kennedy failed at his 1961 summit meeting with Nikita Khrushchev in Vienna partbecause he paid too much attention to detail and tried to go it alone. He had been told that President Eisenhower did not impress the Soviet leaders at the summit because he always turned to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for answers. Mr. Kennedy took on Mr. Khrushchev personally, sometimes without any advisers, and the meeting was a disaster.

So the Reagan administration is probably right to discourage great expectations unwarranted by the intricacies and dangers of the problems. It may be possible to reach accommodation on some bilateral issues such as Afghanistan and Nicaragua; on how to manage unforeseen crises such as the shooting down of the South Korean airliner, and on what to do about airplane hijacking and the latest outbreak of piracy and extortion on the high seas.

If they can agree on the procedures for continuing the nuclear talks, that in itself will be useful. The bet in this corner is that Geneva will be something of a scoreless tie: no great break-throughs, no great disasters, but probably a little better than the present gloomy predictions.

Betty Heitman, co-chair of the Re-publican Party, describes the change in atmosphere more benignly, "What has happened with Donald Regan," she says, "is that he's restructuring the White House so that it's more like a corporate board and everyone reports to him as CEO."

When Donald Regan was last a chief executive officer, of Merrill Lynch, there was one female manag-ing director. Now that Mrs. Heckler is following Jeane Kirkpatrick, only one woman will be left the "board" of this corporation: Elizabeth Dole, Mr. Regan must feel right at home.

Not a single woman attends senior staff meetings at the White House. Not one regularly sits at National Security Meetings any more. Nor, since Faith Whittlesey's de-influence because of its geographic position. He likened moving his country to running a supertanker. He said there had been a slow turnabout since he took power three years ago, with many waves sloshing over the gunwales. But now the country was on the "right course." The economy, he said, had shown negative growth, rising inflation and mounting jobless rates when he took over. Now inflation was at 2 percent and the unemployment ligures were climbing at a slower pace. He predicted that real economic growth would hit 3 percent in 1986. "It is a slow recovery, but long and solid."

He evoked "cultural pessimism," a label pasted on West Germany by many Americans. Without any prompting he said that if leaders always talked about World War III and the end of agriculture and the loss of jobs, people were bound to be discontent. But attitudes changed when leaders stressed opportunities. In response to a question as to whether Germans were happy, Mr. Kohl, unlike most of his countrymen, replied in the affirmative. In the same vein, he initiated, as not many Europeans do, a discussion of Japan. He said that the Japanese did not have more "gray matter" in their heads than other people. They thought differently. To compete effectively it was only necessary for Germans to think differently, too. Instead of thinking about vacations, they had to think about the future. In the matter of foreign policy, Mr. Kohl again contrasted the present with conditions only three years ago. Then, he said, pointing through the windows of his office, 300,000 people were in the streets demonstrating for peace. Now the scene was placed.

Relations with America and France were particularly good. Some 🎄 of his aides were troubled by the summary tone of a U.S. invitation to attend a meeting of industrial countries at the United Nations before President Reagan meets General Secretary Gorbachev. Mr. Kohl waved that away as a misunderstanding—a bagatelle when weighed against his personal relations with the president. He was equally warm in landing President François Mitterrand for standing by West Germany against the Russians. In that context he mentioned the trip that he and Mr. Mit-terrand made to Berlin. He said that no other French leader had gone to Berlin with his German counterpart. As to the Russians, Mr. Kohl snorted at those who consider Mr. Gorbachev a "liberal." He spoke of Marxism-Leninism as a doctrine not equal to the challenge of modern times. He indicated that there were only two ways a Communist leader could rule Russia — Stalin's way. with the Gulag and guns at every-body's head, or Khrushchev's "goulash Communism." Which way Mr. Gorbachev would choose, Mr. Kohl felt, was still unknown. But he denied that standing firm against Russia would necessarily bring bad results. He counted the deployment of American intermediate-range missiles in West Germany last year as an asset. In the same vein, he said that he would move before the 1987 elections to lengthen the period of required military service. He pointed out that only about half of Soviet conscripts were Russian, with most of the rest coming from Asia.

The latest Soviet proposals for mutual cuts in offensive missiles struck Mr. Kohl as one-sided. But he thinks that a compromise between Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev can be struck. Although he declined to elaborate, he said that when he meets President Reagan in a fortnight he will have some concrete suggestions.

In Paris last week, Mr. Gorbachev disclosed that the Soviet Union had reduced its arsenal of operational SS-20 missiles targeted on Western Europe to 243, which, he said, precisely accords with the level of June 1984.

Facing dissent within his own Christian Democratic Party over the missile issue, Mr. Lubbers on June 1, 1984, postponed a decision on deployment, which has been fiercely opposed by leftist parties and street protesters backed by Protestant church groups.

"We want to study what it really means," said Jacob de Ruiter, the Dutch defense minister. "But as a government we cannot say that it was the breakthrough that we hoped for on June 1."
In an interview, Mr. de Ruiter said that the decisive question for the Dutch government was the total number of SS-20s deployed in the Soviet Union, which he noted Mr. Gorbachev had declined to reveal at a news conference in Paris. The decision to give the go-ahead for the deployment of the cruise missiles at an ap base at Woensdrecht in 1988 is expected to be announced in the first week of November, according to Dutch officials and Western diplomats.

Yet final parliamentary approval is not likely until late February or early March, when the election campaign will have started. The Labor Party plans to make the mis-siles a central campaign issue, and the government coalition is clearly nervous that fresh Soviet diplomatic initiatives may again influence domestic politics.

"The country is evenly divided," said Joris Voorhoeve, a defense expert in the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy, the junior coalition party, "It's going to be difficult, very difficult. But if evcrything goes well we will have it signed, sealed and delivered by

A statement distributed among Western reporters said parliament approved the law despite the protests of students and rectors of 92 Polish universities.

"We call on all the students in our university to boycott the elections," said a statement by the student governing body at the univer-sity, which is the only Catholic university in Eastern Europe. Under the law, rectors can dismiss students for taking part in illegal demonstrations on the campuses and summon the police to break up the rallies. A survey by the Association of conclusion that our presence in these meetings would not make any sense," he said. But a leading dissident who is not linked with Solidarity, Adam Woiciechowski, criticized the un-

A Massive Exhibition of 20th-Century German Art

which opened Friday, is a massive undertaking, with more than 50 artists represented in a show of 300 paintings and sculptures. Among the high points:

Lovis Corinth (1858-1925) is represented by a dozen paintings from the last decade of his life, including his final despairing cry. "Ecce Homo," a presentation of Christ in modern dress (loaned by the Kunstmuseum of Basel).

Alexej von Jawlensky (1864-1941) was born at Torsok in White Russia, was an officer in the Czarist army from 1884 through 1896, and studied art as a gentleman amateur at the St. Petersburg Academy. where his teacher was Ilva Repin. He resigned his commission and moved to Munich, where at Anton Azbè's painting school he met Vassily Kandinsky (also represented in this exhibition). He traveled much in France and Italy, in France meeting Matisse, who clearly influenced "Schakko with Flat Hat" (1910), one of his three paintings in this show.

Although he trained in France, Emil Nolde (1867-1956) remained quintessentially German. He suffered bitterly from the "degenerate" label; a thousand of his paintings were confiscated by the Nazis in 1937. In 1941, though officially forbidden to paint, he started jotting down ideas in watercolor on and Beckmann.

Wilhelm Lehmbruck (1881-1919) was the fourth child of a large mining family who won a scholarship to the Düsseldorf Academy of Art and later went to Paris, where he was particularly influenced by Rodin and Maillol. He was more a modeler than a carver; the eight sculptures in the show are cast, chiefly in bronze, but one or two in pulverized stone, which he believed more faithfully represented the original modeling clay. With the war he became an orderly in a military hospital, though he continued to produce sculpture, such as the Fallen Man" (1915-16). Horrified by the sights and sounds of his service, he deserted to Switzerland, returned to Berlin late in 1918 and killed himself five months later.

This was very adequately displayed and documented in London in a major Arts Council exhibition in 1978-79. Wisely, therefore, the organizers of the present show have given the movement reasonable but not overwhelming representation. Chief among the realists in this show are Christian Schad (1884-1982) and Otto Dix (1891-1969).

Encouraged by his affluent family, Schad began to paint while a schoolboy. Their incompetence is nowhere better exemplified than in Polke's "Untitled: Referring to Max Ernst" (1981), an ill-painted satire on a small, beautifully crafted papier collé - "Et les papillons se mettent à chanter," one of 150 images created in 1929 for Ernst's Surreal collage-novel "La Femme

A unique, true historic reproduction of his LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Remarkably, despite the many millions of words that William Shakespeare wrote, little evidence of the great Bard's handwriting still exists. The notable exception is his Will - the most personal and the richest in biographical detail of the surviving Shakespeare documents - which clearly shows his own handwriting.

This is now available, based on special permission to reproduce the original, securely protected in the Public Records Museum, London. STRESS destroys us. LIVING CELLS help us.

At the beginning of the nineteen seventies stress was considered to be the most dangerous killer of men. Today an increasing number of women are afflicted by it.

Cell Therapy in Lenggries more than 53,000 men and women have been treated for all kinds of symptoms of wear and tear in the past 35 years. These days more and more patients are complaining about symptoms typical for stress, such as: sweaty hands, sweating under the armpits, palpitation,

• migraine, feelings of dizziness, blurred vision,

• diarrhoea and stomach cramps. If we feel we are under pressure or that things are becoming too much for us our body begins to charge itself with tremendous energy that we can neither dispel by fighting it nor by running away from it. We have to swallow our anger. Our reserves of energy are unused and deposit themselves as fatty acids in the walls of our vascular organs.

That is why stress is the number one risk factor leading to heart failure. It is a fact that hardly anybody can protect himself from stress. However, we can protect ourselves from the results

If you still believe in me, save me.

For nearly a hundred years, the Statue of Liberty has stood on the edge of the New World, America's most powerful symbol of freedom and hope. Today the ravages of almost a century of weather and pollution have left their marks. Corrosion has eaten away at the iron framework. New holes continue to appear in the copper sheets that form the exterior.

Less than a mile away, on Ellis Island where the ancestors of nearly half of all Americans first stepped onto American soil, the Great Hall of the Immigration Center is a hollow ruin. Rooms are vandalized, passageways overgrown with vegetation, walls crumbling in decay.

Inspiring plans have been developed to restore the Statue and to create at Ellis Island a living monument to the ethnic diversity of this country of immigrants. But unless restoration is begun now, ceremonies marking the hundredth anniversaries of these two landmarks in America's heritage could be held in commemoration of national treasures that no longer exist. Sections of the statue have already been declared unsafe and closed to visitors. The 230 million dollars needed to carry out the work is needed now.

All of the money must come from private donations; the federal government is not raising the funds. This is consistent with the origins of the Statue. The French people themselves paid for its creation. And thousands of American school children contributed to its construction and to the pedestal.

The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission appointed by President Reagan is asking every American business, every American citizen to join in raising these funds. The torch of liberty is everyone's to cherish. Could we hold up our heads as Americans if we allowed the time to come when she can no longer hold up hers?

One hundred years ago school children gave their pennies to put her up. Your dollars can keep her from falling down.

Key Idea at Seoul: Nations Must Free Up Economies

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

EOUL - The key idea that came out of the International Monetary Fund-World Bank meeting here is that nations should free up their economies for more efficient use of resources and that austerity alone, important as it may be for countries with budgetary and debt problems, cannot solve the world's overall debt problem. What is needed is an environment of overall growth, especially in the industrial nations.

This implies that there must be some accommodation by the IMF to stress long-term growth policies in addition to the more short-term austerity measures that it is accustomed to imposing as conditions for its loans.

Virtually everyone at the meeting has acknowledged - and welcomed — the greater willingness by the United States to recognize that the problems of the poor countries are connected to its own. Further, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d drove home the point that the United States. means to play a more active role in solving the debt problem within the context of world economic growth. But aside from a special lending pool for sub-Saharan African countries and a U.S. proposal for a $29-billion increase in commercial bank and multilateral institution lending to debtor countries over the next three years, what the conference really had to offer was new ideas to solve the world's debt problems.

N A SPEECH to the IMF-World Bank meeting, Jacques de Larosière, the fund's managing director, indicated he was amenable to the idea of looking more closely at long-term Prime Minister Edward Seaga of Jamaica also drove home this point in Seoul. "A balance must be struck so that what we gain in improved financial health is not lost in reduced growth," he said. Mr. Seaga added that his country had done everything that supply-siders or free-enterprisers could desire: It had devalued its currency to make its exports more competitive; it had diverted government programs to the private sector, even including garbage collection and hospitals; it had got rid of burdensome regulations, rebuilt tourism, increased agricultural output and exports, and reached record levels of investment.

Yet all this had not solved the nation's debt problems, Mr. Seaga admitted. For Jamaica had added $270 million in new foreign earnings, but had lost more than $500 million in the mining sector, as world commodity prices dropped and markets for Jamaica's exports, especially bauxite and aluminum, fell. "We must earn our way out of this," Mr. Seaga said, "but we cannot do it unless world markets strengthen."

Mr. Seaga's is the common problem of the developing world. And throughout that world the threat of protectionism is adding to anxieties about its future.

More new ideas are needed. Pakistan's finance minister, Mah-bubul Haq, said that an intellectual breakthrough had been achieved a few years ago when research backed by the World Bank at Sussex University, in southeast England, had shown that redistribution of income could be combined with economic growth — by increasing the productivity of the poor, particularly the small farmer, and through the expansion of the public services of education and health. Now, Mr. Haq said, "We need similar, thoughtful work on adjustment through growth, so that from a slogan we can proceed to an operational policy." It was legitimate, he said, to ask the question. "Must we starve our children to pay our debts?" But, he added, there was another legitimate question: "Must we starve our children to pay our defense expenditures?" From a man whose country has been increasing its military spending rapidly, this was a daring question to pose the Seoul gathering.

Mr. Hag noted that from 1972 to 1982 the health and

Daimler Seeks to Expand

Auto Firm Set For AEG Stake

Reuters — Daimler-Benz AG, the West German automaker, was Friday poised to buy more than 25 percent of the electri-cal group, AEG AG.

A spokesman for the West German Cartel Office said Daimler had applied to take a stake of more than 25 percent in AEG and would probably acquire it in several stages. He could not say from whom Daimler would buy the

The move comes as West Germany's third largest electrical group is recovering from near collapse in

It also follows Daimler's rapid expansion this year with major pur-chases of aerospace and military

The Stuttgart-based automaker announced in February that it was buying the half of the Munich--based aero-engine producer and military contractor, Motoren-und Turbinen-Union GmbH that it did not already own.

Just four months later it won a battle to take control of the family-owned aero and space-technology concern, Dornier GmbH.

Trading in AEG shares was suspended Friday pending a news con-ference on Monday. Before the suspension, they were trading at 181 DM ($69.62) on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

Daimler shares, which have moved relentlessly higher this year, jumped 63 DM to close at a record high of 1,042 DM.

Frankfurt-based AEG is still on the road to recovery after it repaid creditors in September of last year an agreed-upon amount of 40 per-cent of 4.6 billion DM of debts. World group net profit soared 975 percent to 397.8 million DM last year from only 37 million DM in

A consortium of 24 West German banks holds some 50 percent of AEG's capital totaling 620 million DM. But it is barred from selling big shareholdings until the end of this year under the terms of AEG's 1982 rescue program.

Banking sources said Friday that this meant the Daimler acquisition was unlikely to be possible before the beginning of next year.

AEG almost went under in the and nearly pulled out of the home appliance market in which it had made its name.

Pan Am Pact With United Gains in U.S.

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON - Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole on tentatively approved on Friday the purchase of Pan Amerian World Airways' Pacific Division by United Airlines.

The Justice Department opposed the acquisition last month, saying it could "substantially reduce" competition on routes between the United States and Japan.

United is already the largest U.S. airline, and other companies had also protested the proposed move. It was not immediately clear whether the Justice Department, whose opposition had been presented in the form of "advice" to the Transportation Department, would try to block the acquisition.

The purchase by United of Pan Am's operations in the Pacific for $750 million must still get final approval by the Transportation Department, and could be overturned by President Ronald Rea-

United also must still receive landing rights from Asian countries, including Japan, which may demand some concessions for its own state airline from the United States in return, according to industry sources. United officials have said they were confident that they would be able to get the landing rights.

The two airlines announced the igreement last April. It called for Inited to pay $750 million in cash for 18 Pan Amjumbo jets and other facilities in the Pacific and to absorb about 2,700 Pan Am employces, including 410 pilots.

Mrs. Dole, in approving the transaction, disputed contentions by a number of airlines, including Northwest Orient, American and Eastern, that it would harm competition across the lucrative market linking the United States and Asia. United's acquisition of Pan Am's routes across the Pacific "will not result in substantial lessening of

she said. Her tentative approval did not require specific divestiture of any routes by United to another carrier as had been suggested by the Justice Department.

Unsuccessful Richardson-Vicks Bid Reflects New Game Plan at Unilever

By Steve Lohr New York Times Service

LONDON - When Unilever lost the costly bidding war last week for Richardson-Vicks Inc., the effort by the British-Dutch consumer-products giant fit two patterns — an old one and a new one. The old one was that Unilever was beaten by its traditional nemesis, Procter & Gamble Co. The Cincinnati-based company's $1.24-billion offer was approved by the Richardson-Vicks board, ending Unilever's hopes of buying the Connecticut producer of beauty and health-care goods.

Over the years, Procter & Gamble has consistently outshone Lever Brothers, one of Unilever's big U.S. subsidiaries, in the scramble for the hefty markets afforded by such consumer staples as laundry detergent and toothpaste.

Yet the four-week acquisition attempt by Unil-ever, though ultimately unsuccessful, pointed to the new game plan and management style there. Faced with stagnant markets and crimped profits in Europe, Unilever is committed to increasing its stake in the United States. Acquisitions are part of the effort, but so are new-product introductions, including an expensive new effort by Lever Brothers to grab some of the detergent market, now held by perhaps the leading brand in the Procter & Gamble stable, Tide.

Change at Unilever does not come easily or quickly. Sheer size is one constraint. Within the corporate fold there are 500 operating companies employing 320,000 workers in 75 countries. Unilever posted sales last year of $23 billion as pretax profits rose 20 percent, to the equivalent of $1.3 billion, at the current exchange rate of the British

Managing Unilever, which calls itself the world's largest producer of consumer packaged goods, is often compared to steering a supertanker, meaning that shifting course a few degrees can be an arduous, time-consuming task.

IBM Profit Fell 7% in Quarter

NEW YORK - International Business Machines Corp. said Friday that third-quarter profit fell 7 percent from a year earlier, its third consecutive quarterly decline in earnings. Some Wall Street analysts said, however, that a 9.8-per-cent increase in IBM's revenues in-

IBM said it anticipated strong fourth-quarter shipments of its new 3090 series of mainframe computers, known as the Sierra. IBM began shipping the 3090 machines this summer, ahead of schedule, after noting that customers had put off decisions on purchases until they could compare the 3090 with IBM's older mainframes.

Chinese Growth Began Slowing In 3d Quarter

The Associated Press BEIJING — China's rapidly growing economy began slowing in the third quarter of this year because of reductions in capital construction and spendng, but industrial production sull outpaced energy output according to the government.

The growth rate in the June September period was 14.7 percent, down from 23.1 percent in the first half of the year, a deputy minister in the State Economic Commission, Zhao Weichen, said at a commission meeting. His remarks were re-ported by Xinhua, the official news agency.

Mr. Zhao attributed the success to a series of measures taken by the government "to control the scope of capital construction and tighten funds for consumption," Xinhua said.

China's economy started overheating late last year because of economic changes that gave local enterprises more freedom to spend money and do business. A surge in construction and consumer purchases strained transportation and energy resources.

Officers from one or two of the major lenders would head the consortium, which would be subject to regulatory approval by banking agencies. The major appeal of the superbank would be that it would make management of the debt easier, Mr. Baker said. The problem has been that "you need so many banks to say 'yes' before anyone in the syndicate will say go," he added.

Mr. Volcker has been frequently mentioned as a contender for the job of head of the World Bank when its president, A. W. Clausen, retires next year. However, an administration source said Thursday that it was unlikely that Mr. Volcker would get the job.

GM Calls Fiat Report Speculation

DETROIT - General Motors on Friday called reports that it is on Friday cancer reports that it is negotiating a range of partnerships with Flat "pure speculation," de-spite the fact that the Italian automaker said talks with GM on a venture outside the auto sector are at an advanced stage. Earlier this week, Fiat broke off alks on a venture with Ford. The Wall Street Journal reported Friday that the talks, which could include a joint venture between Fiat and GM's European operations, were being held in Detroit. Sources said the two car makers are a long way from agreement.

"Such stories are just pure specu-lation," said a member of GM's Detroit public relations staff, "There are negotiations with General Motors but they do not concern the vehicle sector," a Fiat spokesman said. "Nothing on

Dassault and Aerospatiale May Share Contract for European Space Shuttle

PARIS — France's two leading aerospace groups, Avions Marcel Dassauli-Bregnier Aviation and Aerospatiale, are likely to share a contract worth about $1.7 billion to design and build the European space shuttle, known as Hermes, industry sources said Friday. Last month it seemed that France's National Center of Space Studies would announce that the contract had gone to Dassault, smellite launcher Ariano.

The news that Dassault was seen as a possible winner helped push its shares up 12 percent on the Paris Bourse in mid-September. But the announcement was not made, and the dossier was sent to Prime despite a bid from Acrospatiale, which constructs the European Minister Laurent Fabius's office, the sources said.

They said government officials now favored both companies starting a type of venture known as a groupement d'intérêt économique, to design and build the craft.

A groupement d'intérêt économique is a French legal structure that allows companies to form a joint organization from which profits can be shared but for which no major capital injection is necessary. No announcement on the move is likely for several weeks while details of the plan are worked out, the sources said.

Western diplomats said the idea of selecting one main contractor for the reuseable spacetraft project had caused such ill feeling in the aviation and space industry that Mr. Fabrus had been forced to act. The diplomats said the attraction of a groupement d'intérêt économique would be that other European aerospace companies, such as Messerschmidt-Bolkow Blohm GmbH of West Germany, could join in easily at any stage:

Motorola Posts $39-Million Loss

SCHAUMBURG, Illinois

Motorola Inc. reported Friday a third-quarter loss of $39 million, or 33 cents a share, compared with a year-earlier net profit of $86 million, or 73 cents a share. Sales to-taled $1.30 billion, down 6 percent from $1'.38 billion a year earlier.

For the first nine-months, net totaled $28 million, or 24 cents a share, compared with $262 million, or $2.21 a share, in the year-earlier period. Sales amounted to $4.00 billion, down 2 percent from $4.05

Citing a severe reduction in demand for semiconductor and computer-related products, Motorola said much of the quarterly loss resulted from special one-time costs associated with staff reductions.

BUSINESS PROFILE / Barbara Thomas, from the SEC to Hong Kong An American Woman Joins Asia's Banking Club

By Dinah Lee

International Herald Tribune
HONG KONG — Even for a nonstop worker like Barbara Thomas, it had been a busier week than usual putting the finishing touches on her most important deal in Hong Kong to date, the rescue of one of the colony's larger Chinese businesses from bankruptcy.

But in her paneled office overlooking the harbor, the unflappable Mrs. Thomas, 39, talked with humor several weeks ago about the changes in her life since she moved to Hong Kong two years ago to work for a London-based merchant bank, Samuel Montagu & Co. Ltd., while her husband Allen opened an office for a New York law firm.

To those in Washington who remember her as the youngest-ever member of the Securities and Exchange Commission under Presiquick adaptation to the different world of British banking in London and the financial capitals of Asia

When asked what she had learned in Hong Kong, she ex-plained: "An old Chinese businessman told me when I first arrived that the Chinese view of issuing new stock is that his family is offering the public a chance to invest in them because you believe in the family's management, and that they don't really owe the public any information on the company. I think in Hong Kong, where you have companies run by Chinese families and Chinese investors, that's right.

"But as Chinese companies start looking for international capital. they are going to have to disclose more to international investors." She calls the Hong Kong community "small and close-knit, but not closed to newcomers."

"Significant international financial and government people from the States and the U.K. come through here all the time - people I'm not so likely to see at such close ton. I see friends of mine from the State Department like Ambassador Richard Fairbanks, or people such as Nancy Reynolds, or Senator Jake Garn, or Joe Allbritton from the Riggs Bank, and the Doles were through this week," she said.

TJUNDREDS of years ago in the western I Sudanese kingdom of Joliba, caretakers of local history were djelis: bards who preserved and sang their people's stories. Today, in Bethesda, Maryland, a novelist and folklorist named Harold Courlander writes that he "became the djeli of Numukeba of Naradugu," the ancient folk-hero Courlander has created in his latest novel.

"The Master of the Forge" is a prose epic that follows the blacksmith Numukeba on his that follows the blacksmith Numitikeba on ms 11-year journey from his village in search of honor and truth. His purpose? "I do not know what I am looking for, only that I am living out my story," says Numikeba, placing himself in a long line of heroes questing spiritually, as well as physically.

Like England's Lancelot and Mali's Sunlines heroes him. Numitable's venture hediata before him, Numukeba's venture be-comes an adventure, all in the name of honor and the faith that his "story" will guide him. foes, does good deeds, and most importantly, augments the faith that sent him out in the first place. He has cinematic encounters with evil, slays

Numnkeba is a sober, straightfaced hero. His philosophy is strongly delineated and ap-pealing. Though Courlander lets him sound like a fortune cookie at times, he also quietly points to the larger lessons embedded in daily activities. Joliba is a world where ritual and community are profoundly respected. This strong sense of alliance and kinship makes Numukeba's self-imposed odyssey all the more

Indeed, in ancient Joliba, what goes around, comes around. A character is a slave one minute and a noble the next. At one point, Numukeba is changed into a dog by the wizard Etchuba. Courlander subtly and successfully challenges conventional social hierarchy through these transformations. Unfortunately, he does not extend the challenge to the world of women, who are scarcely mentioned and exist only to procreate, to heal and to gain he

Courlander has some levely passages that trating his hero's reverence for the material world, such as this monologue to a time

"Have you discovered honor in this attach rhinoceros: ness? If so, tell me what it locks had it is invisible, where do you hade it. Does it has it invisible, where do you hade it. Dees it like in your heart? And when you die and the uniture, claim your heart, where will your heart, where will your heart, where will your heart, the then? As Numukeba went on talking the thinoceros dropped to his forekness and then lay on the earth, watching and instenting.

Creating a world in which one has never lived is no easy task. "The Master of the Forge" is filled with details, but at times they are clickes, evocative of "Africa" through show words and a climand, formal diction, as in this words and a clipped, formal diction, as in this opening paragraph:

"Numnkeba, the blacksmith forged at the forge, completing the last iron link for his wife of chain mail. He heated it to a white glow and of chain mail. He heated it to a white glow and tempered it in milet water. When it was done he fastened it in place and hung the vest over his shoulders testing its fit. His slave said to him, 'Master, the armor becomes you.' Numukeba answered, "Iron does not turn away weap-ons because it "becomes" but because it contains the life force of the sun. And the since answered, 'Yes, Master, it is so.'

Because the epic form is so familiar, the language between setting out and coming home must truly sparkle to distinguish the work. Courlander's does not But it is steady and functional; while not lytical, it trots along at an even gait. It can move large spaces of time with a few gracefully tossed sentences. With the affecting line "I am Numnikeba. I am here," Courlander places his hero in a great tradition of literary cries of "I am," of finding the central self through adversity.

Men no longer venture forth on horseback of search of truth. But they do wrestle with their own faith. This is neither a bona fide African epic nor a purely historical work. It is a gentle. quiet tale about a man "who understands the mysteries of iron" and his quest to understand his own fate.

New Zealand Banks Back Plan to Open the Market

WELLINGTON - New Zealand banks said Monday that they welcomed government proposals to end restrictions on the number of domestic or foreign banks allowed to operate in the country.

The Bankers' Association president, Jim Macanlay, said that deregulation was a logical step by the government to restructure the financial sector. He said terms of the deregulation would be "consistent with the government's own objectives of protecting the integrity of the payments system as a whole, and with a fair and independent valuation of the costs of operating one of the most efficient and lowest-cost clearing systems in the world."

Finance Minister Roger Douglas said Sunday that banking licenses would be granted to any applicant with an issued capital base of 30 million New Zealand dollars ($17.5 million) and a fully paid up capital of 15 million dollars that have proper banking credentials after new laws have been passed. He said the central bank would also be given strengthened supervisory powers but will not dis-criminate against foreign-owned banks.

Rams See Chance to Pull Away Hapless Bucs Still Looking for First Victory

By Michael Janofsky

NEW YORK - Splendid runner that Eric Dickerson is, his return to the Los Angeles Rams after a lengthy holdout and his 226 yards have been less a reason for the Rams' 5-0 start this season than a retooled defense, which has given up only five touchdowns and the fewest points of any team in the National Football League this season.

That should hardly make the Rams welcome guests for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who are 0-5, Sunday in Tampa. But that aside, the Rams have encountered a rather unexpected development in the schedule. A victory over the Buccaneers and losses by the San Francisco 49ers to the Chicago Bears and the New Orleans Saints to the Los Angeles Raiders — not impossible, in either case — would give the Rams a three-game lead in the National Conference West. And the 49ers are the defending league champions. Who would have thought ...

NFL WEEKEND

Well, Fritz Shurmur, for one. He's the Rams' defensive coordinator, the retooler

"This is an extremely big game for us," he said the other day. "By game time, their 0-5 record won't be any more significant than our 5-0."

That may be true, but the defensive schemes he hasimplemented leave the Rams in an advantageous position. Among the changes from last year are more manto-man coverages with the defensive backs, more frequent use of six-man pass coverages, even on some second-down plays, a better rush by the defensive cont and the return to health of the starting safeties, Nolan Cromwell and Johnnie Johnson, and the defensive lineman Gary Jeter. "Last year," Shurmur said, "we didn't challenge offenses near as much as we wanted to. We got a little cautious, playing mostly in zone coverage. So we had to take it upon ourselves to be more aggressive and to raise our efficiency level by covering a little tighter and Tushing a little better." The results have been encouraging. This week the Rams have the sixth-best rated defense in the league, and they rank among the better defensive teams with 21 sacks, eight interceptions and a 51-percent pass-completion rate by opposing quarterbacks.

All of which sounds like more bad news for the Buccaneers. (Harrah's Reno Race & Sports Book has made the Rams 6½-point favorites.)

AMERICAN CONFERENCE Buffalo Bills (0-5) at New England Patriots (2-3): Buffalo Balls (0-3) at I'vew England The Bills, weak in all phases and going nowhere, come at a good time for the Patriots, who beat them, !7-14, three weeks ago. The Patriots are floundering, too, and need to win or fall from contention. They have been scoring fewer than three touchdowns a game, but Buffalo's defense is porous enough to exploit, as the Colts did last Sunday in winning, 49-17. (New En-

Cleveland Browns (3-2) at Houston Ollers (1-4):

The Oilers, losing all of their last four games, have given up increasingly more points and passing yardage in each of the last three games. Kosar also has the advantage of a rushing offense that leads the conference and a defense that has yielded three touchdowns.

in a game only once this season. (Cleveland by 21/2)
Denver Broncos (3-2) at indigrapolis Colis (2-3). As long as the Colts' offensive strength is their ground game, they will have trouble bearing a team like the Broncos, who lead the conference with 151 points. The Broncos have won three of their last four, with John Flway making great strides at quarterback. The Broncos are not without their weaknesses, a porous de-fense, among them. But the Colts' defense does not appear to be capable of slowing down Elway enough or them to win. (Denver by 5½.)

Kansas City Chiefs (3-2) at San Diego Chargers (2-▲ 1 1/3): The Chargers are 0-2 at home this season and aren't doing much more than completing a lot of passes. That happens routinely, like losing. But the Chargers may have one advantage in that their defense tas played surprisingly well against the pass in the last two games, and the Chiefs have been experiencing difficulty in all phases of their offense. (Kansas City

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Chicago Bears (5-0) at San Francisco 49ers (3-2): The last tune they met, in the conference championship game last season, the 49ers won easily, 23-0, in a game the Bears played without their quarterback, Jim McMahon, who was injured. But the last time the 49ers faced McMahon, late in the 1983 season, the Bears won, 13-3, and McMahon is currently the top-rated quarterback in the league. In many respects, this game is more important for the 49ers because a loss, coupled with a victory by the Rams, would leave the defending champions far off the pace in the Western

Division. (San Francisco by 3½.)

Detroit Lions (3-2) at Washington Redskins (2-3): If the Redskins can play with the intensity and emotion they had in their victory over St. Louis, no team could beat them. Not that the Lions are much of a threat. The Lions have never won in Washington, and a shoddy performance in Josing to Green Bay, 43-10, suggests that their streak will remain intact. (Washingesota Vikings (3-2) vs. Green Bay Packers (2-3) at Milwankee: Just when you give up on the Packers, they surprise you, as they did in crushing the Lions. That's why they remain dangerous for the Vikings, who have played well. The key her pass rush. With time, the Packers can make defensive backs squirm. Without it, they don't have enough punch to beat anyone. (Green Bay by 4.)

St. Louis Cardinais (3-2) at Philadelphia Eagles (1 4): The Eagles, for all their problems, have the best pass defense in the league. They are also bringing back Ron Jaworski at quarterback, after he threw for three touchdowns as a reliever in a 23-21 loss to the Saints. The Cardinals, who turned the ball over six times, five on interceptions, in a 27-10 loss to the Redskins, have been playing just badly enough to lose this one. (St. Louis by 5½.)

INTERCONFERENCE

New York Giants (3-2) at Cincinnati Bengals (1-4): Despite their 1-point loss to the Cowboys last Sunday might, the Giants are developing a certain consistency in offense, defense and emotion that should serve them well over the next few weeks. Their new offensive prowess should especially come in handy against the Bengals, who have scored more points — 149 — than all but two other teams. Their record reflects the less fortunate circumstance that they have given up more points — 166 — than any other team. (New York by Pittsburgh Steelers (2-3) at Dallas Cowboys (4-1): By allowing the Dolphins to score on a final drive, the Steelers give the appearance of a team incapable of winning when it matters. They also let the previous game get away. So with only one victory in the last four games, they may not be in the proper spirits to beat the Cowboys, who have the top-rated offense in the National Conference and a defense that leads the league with 14 interceptions. (Dallas by 6.)

New Orleans Saints (3-2) at Los Angeles Raiders (3-2): The Saints have never won four consecutive games.

Never. With a victory over the Raiders, they could Is one possible? Yes. Is one probable? No. The Raiders have been exerting enough of a pass rush these days to give most opposing quarterbacks trouble. And the Saints' quarterback, Dave Wilson, will be operating without Eugene Goodlow, the team's leading receiver, who was injured in the last game and is out for the season. (Los Angeles by 9½.)

Atlanta Falcons (0-5) at Seattle Seahawks (3-2): With Steve Bartkowski injured, the Falcons will start David Archer or Bob Holly. Not that it much matters. Having lost both starting cornerbacks, Kenny Johnson and James Britt, three weeks ago, the Falcons have. given up 10 touchdown passes and nearly 1,000 passng yards. The Seahawks haven't played particularly well in recent weeks, but they won't have to to win this one. (Seattle by 14.)

But such a lofty position is relatively new to the Jets, who have shown a vast improvement in their defense, particularly against the pass. Continued improvement might give them a chance to beat the Dolphins. (Miami by 3½.)

Willie McGee, caught in a rundown on a steal attempt, was finally tagged out by Greg Brock, the Dodger first baseman, who took the throw from second baseman Steve Sax.

■ Umpire Strike Averted

Paul Runge, a National League umpire, has declared that major league umpires will work all playoff and World Series games, indicating that a threatened strike over the expanded league playoff format has been averted. The Associated Press reported from Los Angeles.

"We've agreed to work all games," Runge said Thursday night. "My sense is that it's over. We're satisfied with the way it's turned out. We feel the final result will be in our favor."

The umpires had threatened to strike because their contract for the two championship series was for five games, while the series was expanded to a best-of-seven games

Dodgers Defeat Cardinals Again For a 2-0 Lead

New York Times Service

LOS ANGELES - The scenario was probably fixed in the first in- lining a single to center. He ning: Vince Coleman and Willie McGee, the whippets of the St. Louis Cardinals, got on base for the first time in the National League Championship Series. Both were thrown out trying to steal second

And so, the Los Angeles Dodgers shut down the highest-scoring offense in the league for the second straight time Thursday night. They overwhelmed the Cardinals, 8-2, and took a two-game lead with the pennant only two victories away.

They will try to win it this weekend in St. Louis, where the teams will resume the best-of-seven series Saturday with Bob Welch pitching for the Dodgers and Danny Cox trying to avert a collapse for the Cardinals. And the Cardinals were admittedly banking on the change of venue to restore their spirits and their speed on the slick artificial turf of Busch Stadium.

"We're capable of winning four in a row," said Whitey Herzog, the Cardinal manager. "We had the best road record in baseball and the best home record, too. We just didn't play very good baseball in

"Yes, Coleman and McGee have been picked off or thrown out in the same inning before. You rely on speed, you live dangerously. That's what got us here."

The Cardinals got here by winning 101 games out of 162 played, the best record in the big leagues. They also stole 314 bases and scored 747 runs. But in two nights in Dodger Stadium, they have stolen one base and have been outscored, 12 to 3.

They finally energized their offense in the early innings Thursday night and seemed ready to explode against the Dodger starter, Orel Hershiser. But they left five runners on base in three innings and paid the price: The Dodgers scored three runs in the third inning and two more in the fourth, routed Joaquin Andujar in the fifth and staked Hershiser to his 12th straight victory.

Dodgers had won the opening game because Fernando Valenzuela and Tom Niedenfuer had stopped the St. Louis rabbits. Coleman, who set a rookie record by stealing 110 bases, went 0 for 4 Wednesday night and didn't hit the ball out of the infield. McGee, who stole 56 bases and led the league in hitting with a .353 average, went 0 for 4 and struck out three times.

Finally, after nine throws to first base and one pitchout. Coleman streaked for second. But Mike Scioscia sprang from behind the plate firing and gunned him down McGee then hit a grounder near second base that Mariano Duncan bobbled for an error. Now, sprinter No. 2 was leading off first. And, after one throw over, he headed for second.

This time. Scioscia called a pitchout, and McGee was trapped between first and second and was run down and tagged.

Then Hershiser chopped a high-bounce single over Terry Pendleton, who was playing in close at third, and the Cardinals' lead was gone. Duncan lined to center for the second out. But before Andujar got the third, Ken Landreaux doubled to left center for a 2-1 lead and Bill Madlock singled to make it 3-1.

One inning later, Scioscia led with a bunt and was safe when Darrell Porter fell down chasing it. And Greg Brock nailed Andujar's Everybody agreed that the 1-and-1 pitch into the right-field seats for a home run.

The Dodgers padded their lead with a run in the fifth. Landreaux led off with his second double, to the same spot as the first, and one out later Anduiar walked Pedro Guerrero intentionally. Mike Marshall drove in the run with a single to left, taking second on the throw home as Guerrero went to third.

Semifinals Set Up in Federation Cup

TOYOTA, Japan (AP) — Czechoslovakia swept two singles and one doubles match against Hungary, while Bulgaria beat Britain, 2-1, in Friday's quarterlinals of the Federation Cup tennis tournament, the women's equivalent of the Davis Cup national team tournament for men. Czechoslovakia, seeded No. I, will play fourth-seeded Bulgaria, and the United States, seeded No. 2, will meet third-seeded Australia in Saturday's semifinals. Shows of Vienna's Past

By David Stevens

VIENNA — The mammoth "Dream and Reality" exhibition on turn-of-the-century Vienna ended Sunday, seen by more than 600,000 people since its opening in April and besieged in its final days by hordes of last-minute visitors. But two other exhibitions in town that could be seen without fighting crowds supplemented the big show at the Kunstlerhaus in some ways. In the richly decorated main hall of the Nationalbibliothek, an exhibition (through Ocr. 20) is devoted to the composer Alban Berg to mark the 100th anniversary of his birth. So entangled and overlap-ping was Vienna's artistic and intellectual life during the 50 years of Berg's life that many of the individual items could easily have been included in the "Dream and Reality" show, which amply represented e city's musical life with sections on Mahler, Schoenberg, Berg, Webern and lesser known figures such as Joseph Matthias Hauer, Alexan-

the show at the Künstlerhaus was the restoration of the almost legat the Secession in 1902, and not exhibition. It was done by Alfred Roller, best known as the set designer for most of the historic productions at the Opera during Mahler's directorship, and is a good example of the stylistic shifts in the arts at the time.

Almost next door, the Albertina has a show through Dec. 8 entitled "Die Kunst vom Stein," which is nothing less than the history of lithography from its invention in the late 18th century by Aloys Senefelder to the present. It includes rich documentation on the technical aspects of lithography, its use by artists and an exhibition of the works of almost 150 artists, drawn in large part from the Albertina's aptation of Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," which was an adaptation of Wilder's earlier "The Merchant of Yonkers," itself a free adaptation of a Nestroy farce.

In Vienna however, Nestroy is a staple of the theatrical diet, per-haps as much because of his sharply observed and wittily expressed understanding of human — and especially Viennese — foibles as for his almost Offenbachian satiric sense. There have been two new Nestroy productions already this season, both of plays that are not often staged and that date from the period during and just after the 1848 revolution that, in Vienna, ended the Metternich era but quickly led to another period of "Freiheit in Krähwinkel" was written during the period when the uprising was in full swing, and it is full of revolutionary high spirits. most of them expressed by the part Nestroy wrote for himself, the jour-nalist Eberhard Ultra. Franz Morak plays the part exuberantly, der von Zemlinsky and Franz particularly in the scenes in which he appears in various disguises, For instance, the centerpiece of ranging from a boisterous cossack to Metternich himself. Horst Zankl's production at the Burgtheater was a celebration of the endary Beethoven Frieze of Gustav Klimt, created for an exhibition revolutionary spirit and the musical adaptation by Hansgeorg Koch seen in public since. But the poster bordered on the operatic, but some of the best acting came from veterans in the cast portraying comic reactionary figures.

Even rarer is "Der Alten Mann mit der Jungen Frau," which was written about a year later, after the forces of reaction had come back to Vienna with a vengeance. One aspect of this was theater censorship. so that this play was not done until 1890, and then in bowdlerized form, and is still hardly ever staged.

Nestroy's underlying seriousness is closer to the surface in this play, which operates on two levels. On a personal level it is about the bittersweet marital stresses of a man of 60 married to a girl of 20. On a social level, it is full of acrid, and still timely, observations on human frailty and political perversity.

Too bad Nestroy cannot be exported as easily as a Sachertorte.

Take a Leap: Parachuting for Thrills

F ORT COLLINS, Colorado R. J. Garnerin, leaped from a balloon while he was harnessed to a big silk canopy he called a para-chate, which can be translated roughly as "prevent-fall." Garnerin did it for sport, and, as such, jumping from high places has developed a considerable following. In the United States it has become known as sky diving because most jumpers do not open their parachutes until late in the plunge. Forty thousand Americans are estimated to have leaped from planes at least once in

[There are more than 20,000 sky-divers in France and an average of eight deaths a year from the sport, according to the Federation Française de Parachutisme. In Britain there are 35,000 participants with an average of 35 fatalties a year, and in West Germany about 8,500 participants with 10 deaths a year, according to the Federation Aeronautique Internationale. In Italy there are 3,000 sky-divers and two to three fatal accidents a year, according to the Aeroclub d'Italia.]

Most sky divers apparently perform the feat once and brag about it from then on, one jumpmaster said. The sport has been plagued by its reputation as a risky, even foolhardy activity. Yet it's that sense of risk contributes to the thrill of a sport that "is like flying your own body," as Tim Monsees, head of Sky's West Parachute Center in Fort Collins, put it.

"Everybody's different," Mon-sees said. "Some people are still scared after 50 jumps, but for them the thrill and excitement of being up there outweigh the anxiety, and that's what keeps them coming back."

On Sept. 29, a planeload of sky divers crashed on takeoff in Georgia, killing 16 jumpers and the pilot. While most descriptions of the crash called it a sky-diving accident, defenders of the sport

"The people who were killed weren't sky divers at that point; they were passengers," said Mi-chael Truffer, publisher of Sky Diving magazine. "A basketball

Precise figures on sky-diving fatalities in the United States are hard to come by. Truffer said that 35 to 40 people a year died in accidents after they left the plane — and that those are the only accidents that should be linked directly to the sport.

Sky-diving equipment has evolved from the heavy, roundcanopy military surplus chutes that pioneers of the sport began using in the early 1950s to light,

The Knoxville News Sentinel newspaper quoted a government drug agent as saying the plane's owner had botched a cocaine delivery and was killed in the crash in revenge by Colombian smugglers. The same plane was nearly involved in a crash earlier, in upstate New York. Truffer said it took special training to fly a sky divers' plane and followers of the sport ought to assure themselves of the pilot's experience. "It's cheapest to fill it with as many jumpers as you can," he said of a typical sky-diving flight. The pilot fills it to near gross weight, he flies it with the door removed, which is noisier and colder than he's used to, and unless he has had the proper training and checkout, if he has a problem he can get into trouble."

Federal Aviation Administration regulations on the sport are primarily concerned with the safety and property of people on the ground, not in the air. Other regulations require that all parachutes for sky diving meet a standard, that reserve chutes be repacked every 120 days by a rigger licensed by the FAA, and that everyone in a plane flying with the door removed wear an approved chute.

On April 17, 1981, that last rule saved the life of the pilot of a small plane for Sky's West sky divers that was struck by a twinengine commuter plane not far from Fort Collins. Two jumpers Thornton 2d was found dead, still were killed in the collision; all 13

Dylan's Doubts as Poet

Though be named himself after Bran Though he named himsell after Dylan Thomas, the singer-song-writer Bob Dylan said in his first television interview in 20 years that he wasn't sure he qualified as a poet. Dylan told the ABC network's "20-20," program: "I don't know if I'd call myself a poet or not. I would like to but I'm not really qualified. I don't know what, you know. Robert Frost or Keats or you know, Robert Frest or Keats or T. S. Eliot would really think of my stuff." The former Robert Zimmer man, known for his often enigmatic lyrics, also said he wasn't wild about the words of the charity fund-raising song "We Are the World." "I wasn't so convinced about the message of the song to tell you the truth. I don't think people can save themselves."

The singer Engelbert Humper-dinck says a combination of a sinus infection, bronchitis, laryngitis and pharyngitis kept him from performing a series of concerts in Indianapolis in 1982. Testifying in Lebanon, Indiana, in a suit filed against him by Starlight Musicals Inc., Humperdinck, 49, said: "I only cancel when I am desperately ill and can't walk onstage." Judge Ronald E. Drury repeatedly warned spectators to refrain from applause and other outbursts during the singer's testimony.

Robert Davall put his hands on his hips, took a deep breath and convulsed his fellow students at mercenary school by saying: "I love the smell of tear gas in the morning." The actor — famous for the line "I love the smell of napalm in the morning" from the Vietnam film "Apocalypse Now" — was preparing for a film role as a mercenary. At Frank Camper's The Mer-evangelism fell $1 million in the cenary School, near Birmingham. Alabama, he spent several days dodging tear gas and training in hand-to-hand combat. The school attracted national attention because three Sikh terrorists charged in a plot to assassinate Prime Min-ister Rajiv Chandi of India had trained there.

Former Mayor Jane Byrne of Chicago, tooling up a campaign to regain the office in 1987, can be seen rocking and rolling in a video by a local band called Johnny and the Leisure Suits, led by Jonathon Brandmeier, a disc jockey. Byrne said she was taping "We're All Crazy "bout Chicago" because it was "something light and positive. We've seen a lot of strife and fighting and turnoil in this city and ing and termoil in this city and people are awfully sick of it."

A woman with a reputation as a nonstop talker has raised £100 (about $140) for her town's soccer team by shutting up for five hours. Glenys Tipton of Halesowen, England, said that after she had to have jaw surgery, she had trouble persuading her friends that the affliction had not been caused by her filestion had not been caused by her filestion. garrulity. So she set up a collection box and refused to talk to anyone. Five hours later she told reporters: I know I am a chatterbox. But I was determined to prove to every-one that my hospital visit had nothing to do with talking too much, and I could stop if I wanted."

Byron Jam's says his disclosure last February that he had a crip-pling form of arthritis changed his life. "A great burden had been lifted from my shoulders," the concert pianist was quoted as saying in Parade magazine. "So much energy had gone into hiding my secret." At a White House concert Feb. 25, Jams disclosed that he had psoriatic arthritis. He said he had concealed his condition because had didn't want people pitying him. Despite the disease, he plays 50 concerts a year. "The doctors were amazed that I could play at all," he said. y at ould per-lops. neen anon oring up to rove

"That was over a five-week period when we were called bigots and everything else in the media," he said, "but that money has long since come back." Falwell, founde of the conservative group More Majority, visited South Africa August and was criticized for comments against divesting U holdings in South Africa against the black leader Bimond Tutu. In Nashville, T nessee, to dedicate a new Baptish church sanctuary, Falwell said he planned another trip to South Africa next month.
